ADDITIONAL COMMENTS

This entry level professional classification is responsible for job functions that require specialized non-theoretical skills coupled with a procedural understanding of standard program activities. Work activities are impacted by changing priorities and differing situations which demand that the incumbent choose an appropriate procedure. This may include the search for new applications or procedures. Supervision, guidance and assistance is provided to support staff on administrative policies, procedures and functions. This classification may provide limited clerical/secretarial support to an academic and/or administrative head (i.e. wordprocessing, making travel arrangements, scheduling meetings, maintaining files, etc.) however, these are related not primary duties being performed because of the absence of, or lack of, full-time subordinate personnel. It is expected that this classification will be assigned on a limited basis and reviewed periodically. Work assignments require independence of action as well as the ability to prioritize multiple varied tasks. This classification will only be assigned to a small department or unit having no full-time clerical/secretarial support personnel. This classification generally reports to an academic and/or administrative head.
